

A large, black and white photograph of a nuclear explosion's mushroom cloud dominates the background. The cloud is massive, with a thick column of smoke and debris rising from the ground and expanding into a large, billowing cloud at the top. The ground below is a flat, open landscape with some distant hills and a few small structures.

Nuclear War on the Korean Peninsula:

Historical Perspectives on a Possible Future

The Cuban Missile Crisis: The Nuclear War That Wasn't
Howard Jones, University Research Professor of History Emeritus

Inside the Hermit Kingdom: What Can We Know about the DPRK
Di Luo, Assistant Professor of History

Nuclear War Can Ruin Your Day: Thinking about the Unthinkable
Harold Selesky, Associate Professor of History

Friday, 9 February 2018 4:00pm
Room 125, ten Hoor Hall

Light Refreshments Provided. All Welcome!